Duplicate, Signed Ballots Urged to Check Vote Fraud

Attorney-General-Elect Carl Bailey Outlines Possible Remedy

NO REAL SECRECY

Voters Might as Well Sign Ballot, for Judges Number It Anyway

LITTLE ROCK—A state election commission and duplicate, signed ballots were recommended Thursday by Carl E. Bailey, attorney general-elect, as measures to "cure or prevent the recurrence of election frauds which have been a stench in the nostrils of the people of this state in recent months."

He also suggested that recounts be granted upon demand and that the burden of proof fall upon the beneficiary in any precinct or county where the total votes exceeds the number of poll tax receipts.

The specific recommendations for legislation to safeguard elections were made in response to a request from Senator Sam Levine of Pine Bluff.

"Generally speaking," Mr. Bailey wrote the state senate, "the object of any legislation concerning the conduct of elections should be to guarantee to the people that their will as expressed by their ballot will not be thwarted or perverted."

"It is a matter of common knowledge that this has occurred and because of legal technicalities and the expense involved in such legislation, plus the indisposition of various public officials to act, no correction has occurred generally, and none has occurred in individual instances except rarely."

Classifies Fraud Methods

"It is helpful in arriving at a decision about what should be embodied in such legislation to know the mechanics through which election frauds have been perpetrated. My investigation indicates that these frauds are perpetrated in the following manners:

"1. In some instances, corrupt election officials have substituted ballots marked by themselves for the ballots originally cast by the voters.

"2. In some instances, those responsible for election frauds have simply and brazenly falsified the tabulation of votes.

"To correct frauds by the first method, any proposed legislation should, in my opinion, provide that ballots be printed in duplicate, that the voter sign the ballot in duplicate, cast the original and retain the duplicate.

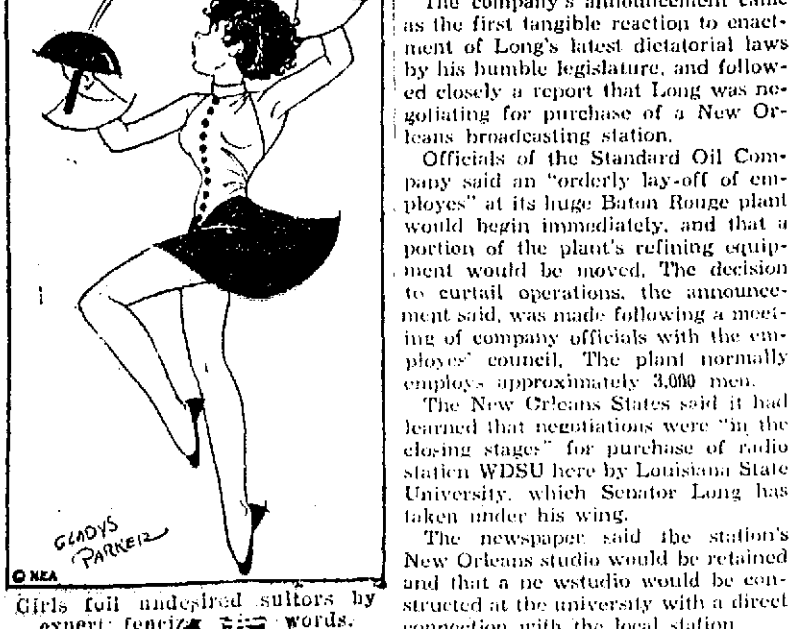

"These ballots should be numbered by the printer at the time of printing, and the set should specifically designate the duplicate ballot in possession of the voter as the best evidence when the original has been mutilated, destroyed, or stolen.

"Under existing law, the beneficiary of a fraudulent tabulation makes his position absolutely invulnerable by destruction, mutilation, or theft of the ballots, because the tabulation, in absence of the ballots, becomes the next best evidence."

F. D. Puts Relief Plan Up to Congress

U. S. Would Carry 3 1/2 Million, With States Aiding 1 1/2

Roosevelt Presents Enlarged Program to New Congress Friday

NEW PUBLIC WORKS

Slum-Clearance and Grade-Crossing Elimination Are Proposed

WASHINGTON—(AP)—President Roosevelt put up to congress Friday a "new and greatly enlarged" plan whereby the government would make jobs for 3 1/2 million unemployed.

Under this plan 1 1/2 million people on federal relief would be taken care of by the states.

The president proposed to supplant the old with a variety of job-making projects such as slum clearance and grade-crossing elimination.

Roosevelt gave assurance that funds he would seek for these proposals would be within the sound credit of government.

He warned those who "for speculative profit of partisan purpose" attempt to take advantage of the public's faith.

He did not estimate the cost of his proposals.

World Court Issue

WASHINGTON—(AP)—President Roosevelt was said in authoritative Democratic circles Friday to be preparing a special message to the senate urging early ratification of a protocol of American adherence to the World Court.

Republicans Strike
WASHINGTON—(AP)—The seventy-fourth congress fell into controversy within an hour after meeting Thursday over a house Republican recovery program which caused reverberations at both ends of the capitol.

While Democrats awaited President Roosevelt's message Friday to give them the first real look at the course he wants congress to follow, a program was issued by house Republican leaders.

It soon became apparent that some Republican liberals regarded the program as too conservative.

Drafted chiefly by Representative Snell of New York, Republican leader, it criticized some of the Roosevelt recovery program. Senator Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader, declared it "so general that they merely indicate a spirit of opposition without making clear the basis of that opposition."

Senator McNary of Oregon, Republican senate leader, refused to comment, saying "It has never been submitted to our fellows."

"While we shall continue to support the appropriations necessary to meet the present emergencies," Snell said, "we believe the time has now come for the administration to present a definite and complete legislative program for speedy and permanent recovery."

Overseers Opening
The controversy overshadowed a somewhat spectacular opening of the session that saw Representative Joseph W. Byrns of Tennessee, elected speaker of the house before a crowded gallery that included Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and the adoption over cries of "gag" of a house rule increasing to a majority the number of petitioners necessary to force a bill out of committee.

The discussion helped key to a high pitch the expectation of Democrats about the president's message to be delivered Friday about 12:30 p. m. by Mr. Roosevelt. His words will be broadcast.

Democrats have been kept in the dark about the president's message which a few leaders have said would contain a "surprise" in the form of a long range program, dealing with relief, unemployment and social security.

Republican Statement
The Republican statement declared for a balanced budget, sound money, freedom of the press, protective tariff, veterans legislation, old age pensions and unemployment insurance and attacked what it called "this extravagant bureaucratic government of the present administration."

Senator Vandenberg, Republican, Michigan, called it "very fine." Senator Norris, Republican, independent leader, said: "I don't want to comment on that congressional statement."

"By their fruits ye shall know them," was the comment of Senator Harrison, Democrat, Mississippi.

Senator Byrns, Democrat, South Carolina, said "if there had been any restrictions of freedom of speech, he would be spared the presentation of a statement."

6 Convicted for Massacre at K. C.

Richard Galatas, Wife and 4 Others Found Guilty in Nash Case

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—(AP)—Six persons were convicted by a federal court jury Friday of arranging the delivery plot which cost the lives of Frank Nash, convict, and four officers in the union station plaza here in June, 1933.

Included among those convicted were Richard Galatas and his wife Elizabeth, of Hot Springs, Ark.

Go to Jury

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—A federal jury retired late Thursday night to deliberate whether six persons were guilty of conspiring to obstruct justice by planning the delivery of Frank Nash, convict, from officers.

The union station massacre followed events which the government alleged in the four-day trial laid the groundwork for an attack by a gang upon federal and civil officers at the Kansas City Union station plaza June 7, 1933. Four officers and Nash were killed by gunmen.

Judge Merrill E. Otis, who presided, read the names of the defendants: Louis (Doc) Stacci, Chicago night club operator.

Frank B. (Fritz) Mulloy, Kansas City.

Richard Tallman Gallatas, and Mrs. Elizabeth Gallatas, his wife, both of New Orleans and Hot Springs, Ark.

Herbert Allen Farmer and Mrs. Esther Farmer, his wife, who live near Joplin, Mo.

Vernie Mathis, who posed as the wife of Verne Miller, gangster, pleaded guilty Monday. The government dropped charges against Mrs. Frances Nash, widow of Frank Nash.

Two of the original three counts were dropped because of their similarity.

All But a Fifth of War Debt Paid

U. S. Has Retired 20 Billion of Original 25-Billion Debt

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Twenty billion dollars of America's original World war debt has been liquidated.

This was disclosed Friday in the Treasury's year-end statement, which showed that only $5,122,327,400 of the $25,000,000,000 borrowed by the United States in the prosecution of the war had not been paid at the end of the year.

Governor Cleverly Escapes Moving Job

LITTLE ROCK—Governor Furrell does not rock the idea of moving any more than most men, so when the family decided recently to move, he the date for the event as January 15 the day he will deliver his message to a joint session of the Fifty-fifth General Assembly.

The governor can't help move and make a speech, too, and the speech has to be made, the constitution requires it.

Governor and Mrs. Furrell, who have lived at 1711 Center street the past two years, will move to 4215 Lee avenue.

BOTTOM—Weeping softly at intervals, but meeting one of her life's most tragic hours with Spartan courage, Mrs. Anne Morrow Lindbergh told her story of unutterable sorrow in a quiet, determined voice as she sat in the witness chair at the trial of Bruno Hauptmann. As she told the pitiful details of the night of the kidnapping, she squarely faced the man accused of the murder. The mother is shown here, dressed in black, wearing a small dark satin turban, as she entered the Flemington, N. J., courtroom with a court officer. At the right a cameraman photographs the dramatic scene.

Mountain Killer Captured Asleep

Robert Rose, 24, Taken at Batesville—Rushed to Tucker Farm

BATESVILLE, Ark.—(AP)—A youth identified as Robert Rose, 24, of the Brock mountain district, wanted for the slaying of an Independence county deputy sheriff, was surprised and captured while sleeping in a mountain shack near here Friday.

His capture ended a 40-hour manhunt in which 500 armed citizens and 60 national guardsmen participated.

The capture was made by a small party of officers led by two trusty convicts from the state penitentiary who handled a pair of bloodhounds, which led the group to the spot where the fugitive had spent the night.

Rose was rushed out of this vicinity for safe-keeping.

Officers said the prisoner was being taken to Little Rock but other authorities hinted that his destination was probably the state penal farm at Tucker.

Rose was said by Sheriff Engles to have shot down Deputy Sheriff Everett Wheeler Thursday when the sheriff and his deputy sought to arrest Rose on a minor charge.

The Hempstead Quorum Court will convene in adjourned term at 9 a. m. Monday at the courthouse in Washington.

The court is expected to take additional action on annual appropriations for county government cost and tax levies.

Mine Strike Continues

KATOWICE, Poland—(AP)—Fifty miners, undaunted by the capitulation of 30 comrades, remained underground Thursday in the eighth day of their "suicide strike" at the nearby Baska mine. The 30 who came to the surface Wednesday were weak from hunger. Wives of the holdouts, asserting "our husbands are so stubborn they will die underground if they do not receive work," petitioned the government to intervene to settle the dispute.

Joe G. Jones, 40, Is Dead in Texas

Former Local Feed Store Proprietor Is Buried at Temple

Joe G. Jones, aged about 40, farmer-operator of a feed store here and member of the Hope order of Elks lodge, died Wednesday night at his home in Temple, Texas. He was to be buried there Friday.

Surviving besides his widow and seven-year-old son, Mack, are three brothers. They are: B. M. Jones, Lee Jones and Will Jones, all of Hope. Two sisters, Mrs. Maggie Davis of Emmet, and Mrs. S. M. Hamilton of Hope.

J. T. Jones, Lee and B. M. Jones of this city, attended the funeral.

"That's the Man" Declares Colonel, Recognizing Voice

He Says Hauptmann Spoke When Accepting Ransom From Jafise

IS CROSS-EXAMINED

Defense Claims Kidnaping Was Plotted in Lindbergh Household

FLEMINGTON, N. J.—(AP)—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, from the witness stand Friday accused Bruno Hauptmann of kidnaping his infant son nearly three years ago.

Defense Counsel Reilly asked the famous flier directly if he believed Hauptmann guilty.

Lindbergh said:

"Yes, I do."

Reilly also asked Lindbergh if "master minds" behind the kidnaping might have advertised a reward for a contact with the kidnapers.

"Did it ever strike you that the master mind might set an ad in the paper and answer it himself?" Reilly asked.

"It is conceivable," Lindbergh said. "As a matter of fact," the flier went on, "I tried to consider it with every individual who has been connected in any way with this case—excepting no one."

It immediately became plain that Defense Counsel Reilly was referring to Dr. John F. (Jafise) Condon.

FLEMINGTON, N. J.—(AP)—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh Friday identified the voice of Bruno Richard Hauptmann as that of the man who took the ransom for the kidnaping of his son.

Lindbergh was then subjected to a cross-examination that sought to place the plot within the Lindbergh home.

Lindbergh said he heard the man who took the ransom say:

"Hey, doctor!"

Lindbergh told the court: "That was Hauptmann's voice."

Earlier, the defense counsel announced it would show that Hauptmann had nothing to do with the crime and that it was conceived in the Lindbergh home itself, but not by a member of the family.

The kidnaping was planned and executed by five persons, the defense said.

Mrs. Lindbergh's Story
FLEMINGTON, N. J.—(AP)—Charles and Anne Lindbergh, parents of the baby boy Bruno Richard Hauptmann is charged with kidnaping and killing, told a tense and hushed courtroom Thursday the tragic story of their baby's empty crib.

First, for 45 dramatic minutes, the slight, brown-haired mother related what she knew of the day and night of March 1, 1932, when baby Charles Augustus Lindbergh was stolen from their Sourdland mountains home.

Once her eyes gleamed as though with tears, but she did not lose her composure, as, in low, clear tones, she said simply:

"I looked hastily at the bed—and found it to be empty."

Then, as Hauptmann, the stolid, stoic carpenter, gazed fixedly at the witness stand, Colonel Lindbergh added to the grim narrative.

Firmly he told of the quiet evening and then of the frantic rush to the baby's nursery; of the empty bed and the sinister kidnap note on the window sill.

Lindbergh Heard Crash That Night
Colonel Lindbergh, who must face cross-examination Friday, also disclosed for the first time that he heard a crash earlier in the night—a crash, he said, that might have been caused by the breaking of the ladder carrying kidnapers and baby down from the nursery window.

He thought nothing of it until later, when he was called suddenly to the child's empty room.

"I saw the appearance of the room—the bed—and realized that something had gone wrong," he said.

Mrs. Lindbergh, pale and dressed simply in black, faced Hauptmann, but did not look at him as the prisoner shifted occasionally in his chair. The defense did not cross-examine her.

Her husband, on the witness stand, met the carpenter's stare for a moment. Then Hauptmann dropped his eyes.

Mother Conceals Anguish
Colonel Lindbergh spoke in a clear, firm voice. He was on the stand when court adjourned at 4:02 p. m. The tones of his wife were less audible though clear enough for Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, the jury and most of the spectators to hear.

What mental anguish she conceivably was enduring she concealed. She smiled occasionally but her lower lip and for the most part sat erect in the old wooden chair, her legs crossed, her elbows resting on the arms, her hands in her lap.

She described her son, speaking in

Fight Spread of Cold by Avoiding Contact

There is enough evidence proving that colds are caught by transmission of germs to warrant the warning that persons with severe colds stay in bed and that others stay away from them, if we want to prevent spreading of infection.

Since colds are not always caused by the same germ, use of vaccines to prevent colds would hardly seem to be justified. Injection of stock vaccines would seem to be a shot in the dark.

We also know that colds attack persons in poor health generally. This is especially the case when their bowels are disturbed and when there are difficulties which prevent proper breathing through the nose.

If rooms are poorly ventilated, the chance of catching a cold from other persons in the room is increased. When there are disturbances which keep the mucus membranes in the nose and throat from cleansing themselves in their usual manner by development of mucus which moistens the surface, a cold is likely to develop.

Of course, everybody knows by this time that the chief danger from a cold is not the cold itself, but possibility of a secondary infection of the sinuses, development of pneumonia, and secondary infections of heart and lungs, which may be exceedingly serious, if not fatal.

Numbers of different germs and viruses and varying conditions have been associated from time to time with colds. These germs include not only the one known as the bacillus of influenza, but also the germ which causes pneumonia, the streptococcus that causes sore throats, and probably a number of so-called "filterable viruses," which are infectious materials so small that they cannot be seen with the ordinary microscope.

These various germs are frequently present in noses and throats of healthy persons.

When for any reason the resistance of the individual breaks down, the germs are available and the attacks follow.

He Just Stumbled Into This Murder Mr. Pinkerton's at It Again in New Mystery Tale

A glance at three recent detective thrillers:

"Mr. Pinkerton Finds a Body," by David Frome (Farrar and Rinehart; $2), is a pleasant and neatly complicated English yarn about a series of murders in and about Oxford University.

Mr. Pinkerton is a shy little Mr. Throbbottom of a man who goes down to Oxford to visit a friend, blunders into the dirty work, finds himself under suspicion of murder—and, without realizing it, catches up the important clue which enables his friend, Inspector Bull of Scotland Yard, to solve the crimes.

It's a better-than-average mystery yarn, and Mr. Frome wins a medal with palm for being one of the two or three English writers able to present an American character who doesn't begin every sentence with "I reckon."

"The White Friary Murders," by Carter Dickson (Morrow; $2), is another good English story. This one has to do with a movie actress whose head is blunt-instrumented while she naps in a pavilion once maintained by Charles II for his girl friends.

A movie director is then killed by being thrown down a flight of stairs, which makes it a good day's work for England.

The mystery is unraveled by a big ox of a man from the war office, who solves murders between spells as army intelligence officer.

"White Python," by Mark Channing (Lippincott; $2) is a wild and woolly tale about the dauntless Capt. Colin Gray, who goes to Tibet to a plot against the British raj and encounters subterranean lakes, sacred snakes, beautiful and sinister females, and similar phenomena. It's pretty dizzy, but rather exciting.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Children Need Sugar—Candy Wisely Eaten Is Beneficial

What about candy? Does it make children sick? The answer is no. Pure candy wouldn't make anybody sick, young or old, if they are able to digest sugar at all.

But sugar like everything else eaten cannot be piled into the system by the ton without bad results. Furthermore the word "pure" includes a good many things.

First of all, it should come from a guaranteed source—the candy I mean—and contain no questionable coloring matter.

Candy stores are without need of defense from me. They lean over backwards as a rule to guard against impurity. And the manufacturers have gotten their products down to a system that could not be bettered.

Danger in Over-Indulgence No, there is not the danger there used to be about getting hold of poisoned candy, for certain dyes can be called little else but that.

However, things have changed. Perhaps Junior hasn't been so well. He has been in the habit of spending his pennies at that dirty little hole-in-the-wall and bringing home a half-ton chunk of sunset-colored confection that might not bear analysis. It may be all right.

He may be eating too much candy. Or he may not be well anyway. Or he may not be able to take care of sugar. Or he may be nervous and have a poor stomach. But it also might be those repeated chunks of heaven knows what aren't any too good for him. For it is a fact that although there is not much bad candy sold, there is still some.

Bright colors do not mean impure or dangerous candy by any means. Take a good look at a pound of dollar-and-a-half bon-bons and have a color test. The color of candy is no criticism. It is much more subtle than that, as a rule.

Avoid Rich Kinds for Children Simple kinds are the best for children. Clear candy, taffy, those made without too much if any butter, wholesome chocolates (but chocolate does not agree with all children as we know), "cream wafers," and the various hard candies. Little tummies cannot take care of the richer products.

I think the whole picture of the candy market is a bright one. Do not fear, but try to guard. No one urges this more than the candy makers' associations themselves. Don't let the children gorge. Don't let them eat it right before meals. And use judgment. But sugar gives energy and children need it. Don't give a baby candy.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Sitting Pretty

Good posture is the first requisite not only of a beautiful figure but true beauty itself. The woman who stands correctly—head high, chin in, straight lifted and backbone in a straight line—is sure to be a better picture of loveliness than one who slumps forward in graceless manner.

If you aren't sure whether or not your posture is correct, make this test. Stand about one foot away from a flat wall—heels together. Lean backward until your neck touches the wall. Press your spinal column against the flat surface until you can feel all the vertebrae, except the last three of four, touch it.

Notice there is no curve in your back when you stand this way, no lump between shoulder blades and that your stomach is extremely flat. If you're extremely uncomfortable while holding this correct position, the chances are your posture is bad.

Here's an exercise that will eliminate an exaggerated hollow in your back, teach you how to hold your stomach in and make you look much more slender.

Life on Mars Is Regarded Likely

Earth's Men Could Have Survived There, Scientists Argue

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—The question of whether there is life as we know it upon Mars and Venus receives the most authoritative answer that it ever has received. It is the result of investigation and research in many fields by many men for 100 years, and it was presented Monday night by Prof. Henry N. Russell of Princeton University in his address at Carnegie hall as retiring president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Mars resembles the final stage of a celestial drama of planetary birth and death, according to Dr. Russell. Venus, he said, seems to be at the beginning and much like what a lifeless earth would be. As to Mars he said:

"It would be premature to conclude that Mars must be a lifeless planet. The depletion of oxygen would be very slow, and plant life would probably adjust itself, as it has done on earth in response to far more rapid climatic changes. Whether animal life, if ever present, could have survived, is speculation."

"A race of no more intelligence and engineering skill than our own could presumably meet the situation and survive in diminished numbers breathing electrolytic oxygen, provided that it paid any attention to changes so slow as to be imperceptible in 1,000 generations."

"Evidence for an atmosphere on Mars," he continued, "is afforded by the polar caps. The steady shrinkage during the summer, accompanied by the growth of the opposite cap during the long cold polar night, is explicable only by the melting or evaporation of deposits of some snow-like substance, which is carried as invisible vapor to the opposite pole, and there deposited. A permanent, non-condensable atmosphere is required for the transport of this vapor."

"There can be no reasonable doubt that some small amount of water vapor is actually present in Mars' atmosphere. Radiometric observations of the planet's heat show definitely that the surface rises to temperatures above 0 degrees Centigrade at noon every day in the Martian tropics, and at the pole in mid-summer, though falling far below freezing at night. The polar caps must therefore really be composed of snow, and evaporate into water vapor, even if the pressure is so low that the ice turns directly into vapor without melting. Judging from the amount of solar heat available to evaporate them, the polar caps must be very thin."

"ANN HOLLISTER breaks her engagement to TONY MILLICENT the same day that PETER KENDALL tells VALERIA BENNETT, 'I love you.'"

"But, though I dislike Valeria, I don't underestimate her cleverness. I suppose it won't be long before she lands Peter—hook, line and sinker."

"The next day Valeria comes to see Peter's services for welfare work."

"I hope I didn't interfere with anything really important," she said, slipping her arm through his as they came down the steps. "But my car was in the shop and I felt I must get these things to my needy families. Could you really spare the time or are you doing this to please me?"

"To please you," he smiled, knowing that was the answer she wanted.

"You're sweet," Valeria laid a caressing hand on his arm. She moved closer to him.

"I'm giving you the whole day off tomorrow," she continued. "There's a meeting of my committee in the afternoon and a conference about the clinic tomorrow night. I shall miss seeing you terribly."

"I'll miss seeing you too," Peter said. It came to him as a shock to find that he meant it. Valeria was getting to be a habit with him. The soothing, flattering way of hers had been balm for his wounds. The feeling that he was essential to some woman's happiness was not unpleasant.

"I've found out about you, Peter. And I cannot possibly bear it. All he needed to feel sick—physically, mentally and spiritually—was to remember that phrase in Ann's letter."

And here was Valeria, becoming more womanly all the time; showing qualities he had missed in her before.

Thinking of this, Peter patted her hand, saying awkwardly, "You've been sweet to me, Valeria. I wish I could make up for it. Some way."

"Oh, Peter, you are!" There was a silence after that. A breathless silence, as Valeria waited for his reply.

But Peter said nothing, only frowned intently into space.

It was worth waiting for—Peter's surrender. Valeria settled contentedly against the seat.

"Let's drive out to the house Wednesday night. I want to see it with the lights on. And I'd love to see the garden and river by moonlight."

Peter said, "The furniture isn't there yet. Wouldn't you rather wait?"

"No. We can go again."

"What'll I do with the place—now?"

"Please don't be sorry. I've been happy thinking it was helping you."

"I'm an ungrateful idiot. What time shall I come by for you?"

"About eight."

"Afterward we might drive to Ingleside and talk to Mr. Vincent. He'd be pleased."

"I'll give him a ring and ask him to meet us at the house," Peter said.

ALLAN said to Ann, "I need you this afternoon. Will you go shopping with me?" His dark eyes met hers eagerly.

"I'll be too busy."

"You haven't an alibi. I'm treating the children to a kid's matinee and Sadie has been handsomely tipped to give up her afternoon off and take them."

"But—"

"Ann, there are times when I'm not sure of your sanity. An attractive girl like you turning into a recluse."

"Allan, I—"

"I warn you if you don't come with me, I'm prepared to be an infernal nuisance. Sadie and the children will be away. Lois will be gone. Just you and I."

He had been drinking, Ann saw. Not much, but enough to be the nuisance he boasted he would. In this mood, he reminded her of Tony.

"All right," Ann agreed. "If you really need help I'll come."

"I find I'm no good at decorating without you," he said whimsically. "We'll spend the afternoon looking at tapestries and rugs, at silks and satins, at Chippendale and Sheraton pieces, at Directoire day beds and Empire chairs. We'll talk color schemes. Does the program suit?"

"Perfectly,"

He laughed. "What a queer girl you are—more interested in making another woman's home beautiful than in planning one of your own!"

"My own!" She spoke impulsively, then flushed.

He spoke roughly. "I suppose I'm bound not to follow that opening. Let's get going."

It was not a happy afternoon—Ann trailing beside Allan, listening to his expert comments.

ALLAN VINCENT was in love with her. Or was he? If he were, it was a different type of love than Tony had offered her. Tony's love had lacked stability, but it was not all emotion. Ann had the feeling that there was something impersonal about Allan Vincent's feeling for her. It lacked devotion, yet it was not a light emotion, either. His hand had shaken as he lifted a cigarette. His eyes had smoldered.

He was starved for affection. Lonely, isolated. That must be it. Oh, why had this happened to her? Now everything would be changed. All the friendliness would be gone. She would feel self-conscious, constrained. Perhaps it would be better to go away.

"Ann, I've asked you twice what you think of this 'wrought iron flower stand.'"

"I think it's beautiful."

"And these Wedgwood urns for the garden."

"Lovely."

He gave her a scornful glance. "What a help you are. Let's go home."

Shadows were closing about the bungalow when they drove up. A light flashed on in Mrs. Tracy's bedroom. Allan shot a look at Ann, as he shut off the ignition. "Glad Lois is in, aren't you?"

He said, when she did not reply, "Why shouldn't I make love to you? Because you are the governess to my sister's children?"

"No."

"Then why?" His eyes pleaded with her.

"It would spoil everything," Ann said in a low voice. "I'd have to go away."

"You would do that, Ann?"

"Yes."

"I'll be good," he promised. "I couldn't bear the place now with you gone."

Gas Collections Up 18% During '34

Rate on Auto Licenses Reduced, But Collections Increase

LITTLE ROCK—Collections under Arkansas's 6½ cent gasoline tax in 1934 increased revenues 18.48 per cent over the six-cent tax in 1933. It was shown in the annual report of special tax collections issued by State Revenue Commissioner Earl R. Wiseman Wednesday.

Collections in 1934 totaled $8,032,264.27, compared with $6,347,816.60 in 1933, an increase of $1,684,447.67. In 1933 one-sixth of the tax went to county road funds, but the new refunding law increased the tax a half cent and took half of the tax previously allotted to the counties and applied it to the state highway fund, leaving 7.7 per cent of receipts for the county turnback fund.

Figures released Wednesday by the American Petroleum Industries Committee, giving 1933 collections and estimated 1934 collections by states, indicated that the percentage of increase was higher in Arkansas than in any other state. The increase in Texas was about 14 per cent and in Indiana, 12 per cent.

The increase in automobile license fees in 1934 was 27.25 per cent, from $1,581,935.96 in 1933 to $2,014,730.60 last year.

Increases were shown for all except two of the 23 special taxes and fees collected by the Revenue Department. The malt tax and motor vehicle carrier tax, the latter partially repealed by the new refunding law, showed decreases.

Gross collections totaled $12,678,941.82 last year, compared with $9,923,618.48 in 1933.

We, The People

We are the makers. We have wrought the destinies of child and man. Since ever mind shaped out its thought, Or word or work began. We are the host whose brain and hand Set greed and profit up on thrones, Ours is the labor, ours the land, And ours the bread and bone. We are the herds who daily crowd The narrow dawn; who tread the day With patient power, to silence vowed, And to the wider way. We are the masters. Ours to will The stern high purpose of the State. We are the market and the mill, Fashioned of love and hate. Now, therefore, we, the people, swear This day by the good grace of God, Peace—for the earth, and sea, and air, And plenty from the sod—Selected.

Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Seagins and three little sons, who have been guests of Dr. and Mrs. Geo. Cannon for the past few days will leave Saturday for their home in Texarkana.

Rev. and Mrs. W. R. Chandler have returned from a month's visit with relatives in Paris, Texas.

Mrs. J. R. Williams and Mrs. J. C. Carlton will spend Saturday in Hot Springs.

Misses Miriam Carlton and Doris Moses are expected home Saturday from a week's visit with friends in Little Rock and Batesville.

Misses Nancy Fay Williams, June Malstrom and Frances Harper, music pupils of Mrs. J. C. Carlton will broadcast over KTHS on Saturday morning, during the Children's hour from 10 to 11.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Stubbeman and children, Ruth, Ellen and Junior have returned from a three weeks holiday visit, with relatives in New Orleans, Port Arthur and Cuero, Texas.

Mrs. Mary Della Carrigan has returned to Hendrix College, Conway, after spending the Christmas holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Steve Carrigan.

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES

FIRST METHODIST CHURCH
Rev. Fred R. Harrison, Pastor

Next Sunday, January 6, has been designated as "Covenant Sunday" by the Commission on Evangelism of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The object of "Covenant Sunday" is to induce our people to renew their covenant with Christ, to rededicate themselves to His service in reaching the unsaved, to seek and obtain a renewal of spiritual experience and a conscious acceptance with God.

All Methodists are urged to attend this service to be held at the morning hour. The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be given. No more fitting time is to be found for Christians to rededicate themselves than while on their knees partaking of the sacred symbols of the broken body and shed blood of Him who died for the sins of the whole world. The pastor will bring a brief message at this service.

It is hoped that entire Methodist families will attend this service. It will be a beautiful sight to see every member of each family kneeling together at the altar in renewal of their covenant with God. So let's make this a day—the first Sunday in 1935—when the whole family rededicates itself to God.

At the evening service at 7:15 o'clock the pastor will use as his subject, "Winning Tomorrow's Battles Today." The Sunday School meets at 9:45 a. m. with a class for every age-group. Come worship with us.

FIRST CHRISTIAN CHURCH
Guy D. Holt, Pastor

We hope that everyone will start the New Year right religiously by going to church and Sunday school.

Next Sunday will be the first Sunday in 1935, and we would like to urge you to be in our Bible school promptly at 9:45 a. m., which is our regular starting time.

Worship hour at 11 a. m. in which there will be a place for you. Come and have this fellowship with the Lord and with us. Subject for the morning hour will be "Let Us Go Forward."

Our evening worship hour starting time is 7:30, and we would like for you to come and worship with us. Subject "Pressing Toward the Mark." Prayer meeting Wednesday night at 7:15 p. m. Christian Endeavors meeting at the usual time and place.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH
Thomas Brewster, Pastor

Sunday school this next Lord's day at 9:45 a. m., with classes for all ages. The men of the church and congregation will hold their January meeting Tuesday night. A very fine menu has been prepared by one of our Auxiliary Circles. An excellent program has been prepared for the meeting with Carter Johnson in charge. President Herbert Morley will announce the leader for February and the members of the attendance committee for that month.

The men will assemble in the church from 6:45 to 7 o'clock and it is hoped that by 7 o'clock or 7:15 dinner will be served. All the men of the church and congregation are urged to be present. We would like to know definitely by Tuesday morning if you expect to be present. Please report to one of the following: The pastor, Herbert Morley, Mr. Muldrow, Frank Ward, Mr. Tarpley or Carter Johnson. The music is in charge of Nick Jewell.

Our mid-week service will be held Wednesday at 7:30 p. m. Come and enjoy this service with us.

CHURCH OF CHRIST
West Fifth and Grady Streets
Glenn A. Parks, Minister

Each Wednesday evening at 7:30 we are having a very interesting prayer meeting. There were reported 324 chapters read from the Bible last week. Every person ought to be informed of what the Bible contains. How often do you read it? We invite you to this meeting.

Bible study Sunday morning 10 o'clock. Preaching services 11 a. m. and 7:15 p. m. Subject for morning sermon, "Full Grown Respect." Subject for evening lesson, "The Excellent Of God's Word." The church extends a hearty welcome to all to attend these services. Why not start the new year with a resolution that you will take your family and attend religious services.

FIRST BAPTIST
Wallace R. Rogers, Pastor

The regular services of the First Baptist church will begin at 9:45 Sunday morning. At that time the Sunday School will convene in their separate departments. A good attendance is urged by the different superintendents.

At 10:55 the morning worship will begin. The pastor will preach at both morning and evening services, the latter beginning at 7:30.

At 6:30 the Baptist Training Union will meet. The intermediates will have charge of the closing exercises. All members and the public are invited to attend these instructive unions.

platform of generalities and conflicting principles like this one."

While many, including leading Westerners, generally were wary of commenting, a majority of observers felt the reaction to the statement presaged a session marked by conflicting ideas within Republican ranks.

However, the serious air that dominated the convening of the seventy-third congress on March 2, 1933, five days after President Roosevelt was inaugurated, was lacking at the assembly of the second New Deal Congress.

While Vice President Garner opened the senate, South Trimble, house clerk, presided in the house.

Credentials were presented for the 35 newly-elected senators and 434 representatives.

Telegram From Long
An absentee—Senator Huey P. Long, the Louisiana kingfish—almost stole the show in the senate by having read a telegram announcing that "on Monday, or the first day next week the senate meets, as soon as I can obtain the floor I shall speak on propositions heretofore mentioned in the public press with which I am identified."

The telegram, sent to Senator Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, caused a roar of laughter on the crowded floor and in the packed galleries.

Vice President Garner rapped for order. He warned that the senate was there to "do business."

Long's relations with the Roosevelt administration over public works funds probably will come in for some of his comment.

The spirit of House Democrats was somewhat dampened by the absence of their newly elected leader, Representative William B. Bankhead of Alabama, who was sent to the naval hospital to recuperate from a heart attack.

Freight Rate Hike Asked by Carriers

170-Million-Dollar Increase Declared Necessary at Once

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The Association of American Railroads proposes to formally ask the Interstate Commerce Commission Friday for a $170,000,000 increase in freight rates.

If permission is refused "the effect upon railroad credit will be disastrous," it is said in a brief to be filed Friday.

The brief took issue with what it said was a proposal for a "wholesale scaling down" of railroad obligations.

"In view of the fact that there has been practically no return to the stockholders in the period of depression," the brief said, "this means that the railroads would be required to refund their debts to their bondholders."

Of the request for passing on to the public increased costs of labor and material, the association brief argued: "It is generally recognized that the manufacturers or merchants have the privilege in a period of rising costs of passing these costs on to the consumer. The railroads are asking for the same privilege."

The brief says that operating expenses will have increased $250,000,000 a year within the next few months.

Weekly Sunday School Lesson

Text: John 1:35-42; Mark 1:14-18

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for January 5.

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D.

Editor of Advance

The starting point, or turning point, in the career of a great man is always of particular interest.

A man destined to play a great part in the founding of Christianity was the apostle Peter. How did he come to know Jesus? What led him to accept the Master's call to discipleship?

It is this simple beginning with which our lesson deals. The picture is one of John the Baptist standing with two of his disciples. Looking upon Jesus who was walking nearby, John said, "Behold, the Lamb of God."

The two disciples, who heard John say this, followed Jesus, and Jesus, turning, asked them what they were seeking. Their reply was to ask Jesus where He dwelt. To this Jesus said, "Come and see" and the two disciples of John spent that day with him.

One of the two who heard John speak, and who thus came to know Jesus was Andrew. We do not know a great deal concerning Andrew. So far as we can judge from the New Testament record, he was a plain, patient man, capable of large faith and devotion, but in whose life experience there were no great temptations and no great crises.

So far as the record goes, the most notable thing that Andrew did was to go and find his brother Simon, later called Peter, and bring him to Jesus. Then began that intimate relationship in which Jesus immediately gave Simon a new name, or nickname. "Thou shalt be called, Cephas, which is by interpretation, Peter," or a rock.

So much for the record in John's Gospel.

The record in Mark's Gospel is similar and less complete. It is, perhaps, also, inexplicable except when one takes into account the fuller story in John's Gospel.

Mark tells us that, after John was arrested, Jesus came into Galilee preaching the Gospel. As he passed by the Sea of Galilee, he saw Simon and Andrew fishing, and gave them the invitation, "Come ye after me and I will make you to become fishers of men." The two fishermen "straightaway" left their nets and followed him.

The record as it stands is strange and difficult. It seems hardly conceivable that two fishermen would leave their occupations on a chance invitation from one whom they had never heard or seen before; yet Mark gives us nothing of the background.

The Gospel of John tells what had taken place before the call recorded in Mark's Gospel. Peter and Andrew had already had some opportunity to know Jesus, and they were ready to respond to His call because the fulfillment of His life and teaching had already given Him power over them.

The record seems even in both Gospels very simple, but are not the great decisions and calls in life thus simple? The men who feel with most overwhelming power the demands of a new age, or a new situation, respond with such completeness of decision that the matter seems easy.

Nevertheless, we may understand something of what it meant to these fishermen to leave their nets and to follow Jesus. It may be that they were stirred with visions of their place in a Messianic kingdom which they hoped that He would establish, but they were at least men of sufficiently adventurous spirit to stake their all upon their faith and hope.

One cannot but dwell, also, upon the part that men like Andrew have played in great conversions. One hears hereafter little of Andrew, but a great deal of Peter.

Great men have been won to Jesus and great careers have begun in His service, through the simple witness of humble souls who may never have been heard of themselves, or whose part in God's great plan has been little recognized by their fellow men. Yet God was in their faithful witness.

Have You Had Any Cinnamon Rolls

Lately?

Bake some today with

Menu
Highest Patent Flour

JUST ADD:

1-2 tablespoon ground cinnamon to MENU biscuit dough. Roll in sheets 1-4 inch thick. Spread with melted butter and sprinkle generously with brown sugar, cinnamon and chopped nuts. Roll dough as for jelly roll, cut into slices and place on well greased baking sheets or muffin tins. Bake 15 minutes in hot oven 400 degrees F.

And you can use cinnamon rolls so many ways:

—to take the place of bread for dinner or supper.

—ideal for breakfast.

—just the thing for the kiddies mid-morning or afternoon lunch.

—they would even be in danger during a late night raid of the pantry.

If you baked cinnamon rolls with MENU Flour they would be especially nice, because MENU Flour will improve all your eating.

Prisoners on Both Sides Aided by Bolivian, Paraguayan Clubs

Two new members were introduced by Hope Rotary club Friday noon at Hotel Barlow on a program headed by E. F. McFaddin.

The Rev. Fred Harrison, pastor of First Methodist church, and Philip A. Daulton, Jr., were the new members. Mr. Harrison was introduced by the Rev. Thomas Brewster, pastor of First Presbyterian church, under a new Rotary rule abolishing so far as churches are concerned the limit of one member to a professional classification.

Other guests were: J. A. Embree and Jimmy Henry, Jr., both of Hope. Mr. McFaddin spoke on the foreign fields of Rotary, describing how the Rotarians of Bolivia and Paraguayan, despite the fierce war being waged by those nations, are permitted by their respective governments to correspond with each other and convey relief goods to prisoners of war.

Mr. McFaddin said Rotary now comprises 3715 individual clubs throughout the world, increasing at the rate of 10 clubs per month.

Rotating Circuit for the Judiciary

Arkansas Committee Studies North Carolina's Court System

LITTLE ROCK.—Study of a proposal to set up a system for rotating circuit judges in Arkansas was authorized Thursday at a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Citizens Protective League at the Y. M. C. A., and organization of other county units throughout the state were discussed.

The committee decided to obtain a copy of a North Carolina law which provides for the election of circuit judges in the various circuits and their assignment to other sections of the state by the chief justice of the Supreme Court, with no judge remaining longer than six months in any circuit.

"If we find the law appears to be a good one and has served its purpose in North Carolina, the league will recommend it to the General Assembly of Arkansas during the coming session," said Dr. J. M. Williams of Searcy, president of the league.

"Any law that would remove the circuit courts of Arkansas from politics and local pressure," he added, "would justify the existence of the league, if it accomplished nothing else."

Dr. Williams reported on the organization last Tuesday of the White county unit of the league at a mass meeting of more than 300 citizens in Searcy and said it will be used as a model for organizing other units. The next will be in Independence county, to be organized at a meeting in Batesville.

Dancer Divorces Pinchot II

Parisian theatergoers again will acclaim the dancing of Jeanine Voisin, shown here in striking pose. Her romance that blossomed six years ago in France with Gifford Pinchot II came to an end in Dade City, Fla., divorce court and she will return to the stage. Pinchot is a nephew of Gov. Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania.

Value of Timber as Crop, Discussed

State Forester Urges Woods Conversion of Poor Farm Lands

LITTLE ROCK.—Need of growing timber as a crop on Arkansas land from which trees have been removed is stressed in the first annual report of the Arkansas State Forestry Commission, which was transmitted to Governor Fretwell by Charles A. Gillett, state forester, Thursday.

Describing the "reckless use of our natural resources without any provision for renewing them or making the best use of them," the report says that a land-use problem of the first magnitude is created by existence of a relatively large area of essential forest land in the state, together with the almost complete exhaustion of the original growth of timber. Not more than 2,000,000 acres of the state's original forest area of 32,000,000 acres remains. Forests of the near future will be entirely second growth timber.

Attempts to cultivate land unsuitable for farming and which could be profitably employed in the growing of timber are deplored. Necessity for a reconstruction program under state auspices is predicted. Abundance of land in Arkansas, coupled with low prices, is described as partly to blame for the unfortunate settlement of areas unsuitable for farming. Need for avoiding surplus production of farm commodities is presented as an argument, against continued farming of unproductive land.

DUPLICATE, SIGNED

has been provided before, and the objection was made that the ballot was not secret with the signature on it. This argument against the signature is untenable, because all ballots are numbered (by the judges) and the voter's name registered opposite the number. There is, therefore, as much secrecy attendant upon the signed ballot as upon ballots handled according to the present method.

"The signature on the ballot would prevent corrupt election officials from substituting other ballots. It is inconceivable that any election official would be able to duplicate the signature of voters. Since the signature would guarantee the integrity of the individual's ballot, it seems to me the method is worth adopting even though the element of secrecy might conceivably be less than under the present system."

"Then to obviate the possibility of brazen falsification of the tabulation of the county, a state commission should be set up to receive the ballots from every voting precinct in the state and tabulate the same publicly. At this tabulation any candidate or his representative should be permitted to have the ballots in any box recounted up demand."

Further Study Planned
In this connection, Mr. Bailey said that he had not gone into the details of such a set-up, which is embodied in the Kentucky election law, but he advised Senator Levine that he would study it before the legislature convenes and will be available for conferences and legal assistance in drafting an Arkansas law, if his recommendations in this respect are deemed advisable.

He said the law could be so worded as to provide for an immediate tabulation and returns from election officials, and the forwarding of duplicate tabulations to designated county newspapers as a safeguard; and to designate a definite time limit for the forwarding of the ballots to the state commission. He believes ballots not received within the specified time limit should not be counted.

Both Boys' and Girls' Teams at Hope Armory Friday Night

Coach Hugh Bristow will send his Guernsey Yellow Jackets against the Mineral Springs eagles Friday night at the armory building in Hope.

Mineral Springs' senior girls team will meet the Guernsey sextet in a second game, starting immediately following the boys' contest.

The opening game starts at 7 p. m. Mineral Springs has always boasted a splendid girls team, and this year is no exception, reports from that Howard county town indicated.

HERE AND THERE

criminal or not.

But the presence of so much loot in the enemy's hands is leading us to believe that too often we are prevented from ever knowing, simply because society is stupid enough to allow suspected money to remain in the hands of suspected criminals.

We could remedy this situation. It is a recently accepted premise in cases of political graft that the state has the right to go into the private business of an office-holder with the presumption that all monies whose source he can't explain have been illegally obtained from the public treasury.

My authority is the court record of Samuel Seabury's prosecution of Tammany Hall's crooked magistrates and policemen. I called the attention of the original Arkansas Highway Audit Commission to this ruling in New York State, and as a result the same record was run against our own former state highway officials.

If this is fair and just in our dealings with suspected office-holders, how eminently fair and just it must be in our dealings with suspected criminals.

American criminal procedure should be altered to permit instant seizure by the state of all monies that a criminal suspect can not prove beyond the shadow of a doubt were honorably obtained.

That would end instantly a lot of pseudo-legal assistance which is constantly being hired for criminals.

Steamer Rammed, Sunk by Freighter

150 Rescued, 5 Missing in New York Harbor Disaster

NEW YORK.—(AP)—The steamer Lexington of the Colonial Navigation Company was rammed and sunk in the East river near Brooklyn bridge Wednesday night by the tramp freighter James Christenson. Two hours later, upwards of 150 persons either had been taken off the Lexington or picked up from the icy waters by rescue craft.

Five members of the crew were reported missing. A score or more persons were injured, either in the collision or in rescue work. Most of these suffered fractured limbs, broken ribs or abrasions. A dozen or more were in hospitals, although none was considered in a serious condition.

No bodies had been recovered. One attendant at the line's offices said the Lexington carried about 200 passengers and had a crew of 55. However, officers on board the ship said the passenger list was "light."

The passenger list went down with the ship and it was not determined immediately whether other lives were lost. The Lexington, bound for Providence, R. I., had just left its East river pier. It carried many Brown University students returning from a holiday vacation.

Capt. William O. Pendleton, of Providence, R. I., master of the Lexington attributed the collision to a misunderstanding of signals.

Tobacco Tax Held for Schools Only

Must Be Divided Between Common Schools and Equalizing Fund

LITTLE ROCK.—Attorney General Walter L. Pope advised State Revenue Commissioner Earl R. Wiseman Thursday that receipts from the state cigar and cigarette tax allotted to school purposes should be divided equally between the common school fund and the school equalizing fund.

Mr. Wiseman asked for an opinion on the subject after the state comptroller's office called attention to provisions of Act 19 of 1931 which had been overlooked by state officials.

The attorney general held Monday that proceeds from cigar and cigarette dealers' permits should be credited to the common school fund instead of the general revenue fund. This change was made by Act 19 of 1931, but had been overlooked. The same act re-enacted a provision of a 1929 act which provided that the first $750,000 from the cigar and cigarette tax should be credited to the common school fund, that the second $750,000 should go to the equalizing fund and that all other revenues derived from cigar and cigarette tax stamps should be divided equally between the funds.
